Fayette County, Illinois

1821 - 1831

On February 14, 1812, when the County of Fayette was formed, the boundaries covered all or parts of seventeen of the present Illinois counties. Fayette County ran as far north as the Illinois River in the present counties of LaSalle and Grundy. The other counties included within these boundaries were the present counties of Livingston, Marshall, Woodford, McLean, DeWitt, Piatt, Macon, Moultrie, Christian, Shelby, Montgomery, Effingham, Clay, Marion, and Clinton.

In 1823 Marion County was formed from the southern most part of Fayette County.

In 1824 Clay and Clinton Counties were cut from the parent county of Fayette.

In 1827 Shelby County was formed and Tazewell County was cut from that part of Fayette which now forms part of the counties of McLean, Woodford, Livingston, and DeWitt. With the formation of these counties Fayette County had all of its present area, plus most of the present Effingham County.

In 1831 with the formation of Effingham County, Fayette County took its present boundaries.
